recently donated 5,750,000 Soviet books printed in the Chinese language to various Chinese libraries.

Dopolovina is the director of the International Publishing House of the USSR, and a member of the Soviet delegation which has been in Pei-p'ing since 1 October to participate in activities to strengthen Sino-Soviet ties.

Dopolovina explained the organization and functions of the Soviet publishing and printing industry. As opposed to those in the capitalistic nations, the Soviet publishing and printing industry is a government-owned nonprofit organization. Its main purpose is to serve the people. Because of its responsible nature, any person who wants to pursue this profession should be well-educated and must be a confirmed Communist Party-liner, she added.

Her speech was heard by the officials of the Publishing Committee, Central Propaganda Department, CCP; delegates who attended the Publishing Agencies Conference of the New China Publishing Company; and the library staffs of the Pei-p'ing, Ch'ing-hua, Yen-ching, and Pei-p'ing Teachers' universities.
